Chapter 1 by Charlotte

Gavin Oaks lived in a small town called Ridgewood. He was 20 years old and he lived by himself in a small cottage, making money by selling crops from his garden. One chill morning, Gavin went for a hike, which he did often, to a park nearby. He was walking down his usual trail when he noticed another path veering to the left from the main trail. The path looked overgrown and thorns were sticking out in every direction but Gavin was curious so he stepped into the messy path and kept walking. As he jogged along, he suddenly stopped because a small building stood in his path. The rusty door crept as he stepped inside the shack. It appeared empty but as Gavin took a closer look, he found a key hidden behind an old toolbox. He glanced around once more and discovered a small safe with a keyhole in the corner under some vines. He approached the small box, stuck the key inside, and turned it. Inside the safe was an old fashioned camera. Gavin took the camera out of the safe and stuck it in his backpack and headed home. Gavin slowly neared his cottage and he sat down on his couch and rested his tired legs. He pulled out his backpack and extracted the camera from inside. He took a closer look at the ancient camera and found the film, still intact. He tried to make out the images on the film but he could only see two people. The next day he took the film into a camera store to solve the enigma.
